

Advanced Aho, Hawaiian Cordage Workshop

Aho, Hawaiian cordage, plays a valuable role in traditional societies. From lashing canoes and houses, to making rain capes, fishnets and traps, hunting implements, aho was always in high demand.

This advanced class provides deeper insight in the traditional customs of making various aho for specific uses. This is one of three workshops that will focus on fishing implements and traps, as well as provide community support by making aho for the Makali'i and Hokule'a voyaging canoes.

Who: Individuals with some basic knowledge of cordage

What: Advanced Aho Making

When: April 15, 2016

Where: Kaloko-Honōkohau,
National Historical Park

TIME: 8:30 AM – 4:30 PM

Gary Eoff, has resided in Kona since 1981 as an artist and craftsman, influenced by the rich Hawaiian culture and traditions. He exhibits extensively, focusing on provisioning the canoe for blue water voyaging and demonstrating the close connections between cultural practices and protecting our natural resources. His traditional and contemporary items are frequently used in exhibits, and he often demonstrates his processes at those exhibits and in other education settings.*

This I Mana Ka Lāhui is a collaborative effort between OHA and Kaloko-Honokōhau, NHP